Scheme of Valuation

MAHATMA GANDHI UNIVERSITY, KOTTAYAM
MGU-UGP (Honours)/ MGU-BBA (Honours)/ MGU-BCA (Honours) REGULAR Examination October 2026

FIFTH SEMESTER

Discipline Specific Elective (DSE) - MG5DSE301- PRINCIPLES AND METHODS OF PUBLISHING SCIENCE

Duration: 2 hours Maximum: 70 Marks

Part A

Short Answer Questions

Answer any 10 Questions. Each question carries 2 marks.

1. Scribes were people who wrote and copied documents by hand before the invention of printing.
2. The back of a book jacket contains the blurb or review, author's biography, publisher's details, ISBN and bar code.
3. Tolbert Lanston was an American inventor who developed Monotype typesetting system in 1887.
4. The optical centre is the point slightly above the exact middle of a page where the page appears visually balanced to the human eye.
5. In direct printing the image is transferred directly from the printing plate or image carrier to the paper. e.g., Letterpress printing and gravure printing. In indirect printing the image is transferred first to an intermediate surface and then to the paper . e.g., Offset printing.
6. Outer forme is the set of pages arranged on a printing plate or forme that forms the outer side of a printed sheet when it is folded into a book or booklet.
7. Leading is the space between two lines.
8. Main advantages of an e-book are portability means many e-books can be stored on a single device, easy access, space-saving, search facility, and adjustable text.
9. Layout is the preliminary plan of a printing job. It is the plan for arranging elements on a page, whereas make-up is the process of assembling those elements into complete pages ready for printing. It assembles text, illustrations and other elements into the required page format.
10. Newspapers are published in different forms based on their size, frequency of publication, and content. The main physical forms of newspapers are broadsheet, tabloid, and Berliner. Newspapers can also be classified as daily, weekly, Sunday newspaper, national, regional, local, financial, and sports newspapers.
11. Newspaper design is the process of planning and arranging news stories, headlines, photographs, advertisements, and other elements on newspaper pages to make them attractive, readable, and easy to understand.

12. A magazine is a periodical publication that contains articles, stories, photographs, illustrations, and advertisements on specific subjects or a variety of topics. It is published at regular intervals, such as weekly, monthly, or quarterly.

(10 x 2= 20)

Part B

Short Essay Questions

Answer any six questions. Each question carries five marks.

.

13. Reference aids are books, documents, and other information sources that help an editor verify facts, check language, confirm spellings, and improve the accuracy of a manuscript. They provide reliable information that helps the editor prepare a correct, clear, and high-quality book.
14. Proofreading and editing are important stages in book production. Both aim to improve the quality of a manuscript, but they differ in their purpose and scope. Proofreading is the final checking of a text before publication. Editing involves improving a manuscript before publication.
15. The essential characteristics of a book are: a book must be non-periodical printed publication, it should have at least 49 pages excluding cover, the printed pages should be bound together between two covers, it may be in one volume or more volumes, it must be portable, it may be written by one or more authors, and more than 50- identical copies should be printed and put on sale.
16. Book binding is the process of joining printed pages together and attaching a cover to produce a complete book. Different methods of book binding are hardcover binding, perfect binding, saddle stitching, spiral binding and comb binding.
17. A publisher selects paper based on quality, weight, surface, durability, printing requirements, and production cost. The two important paper sizes are International DIN system and Standard English paper sizes. In DIN system paper sizes are A series, B series and C series. A series is the only one used for book work. The commonly used Standard English paper sizes are Crown, Demy, Foolscap, Royal, Medium, Large Post, Imperial etc.
18. The format of a book refers to the physical size, shape, and general arrangement of a book. It is determined by factors such as the size of the paper, the method of folding, the number of pages, the binding style, and the purpose of the publication.
19. The main elements of e-book design are layout and structure, typography, cover design, images and illustrations, navigation, colour scheme, multimedia elements, hyperlinks, accessibility, responsive design, white space and spacing, table of content and index.
20. Adobe Indesign, Calibre and Sigil are the e-book compiling tools.
21. Periodicals are publications that are issued at regular intervals, such as daily, weekly, monthly, quarterly, or annually. They contain articles, news, reports, research papers, reviews, and other information on various subjects.
22. A newspaper report is a factual account of an event, incident, or issue published in a newspaper. It provides information to readers in a clear, accurate, and organised manner. A newspaper report follows a specific format to help readers understand the important details quickly.

(6 x 5= 30)

Part C

Essay Questions

Answer any two questions. Each question carries ten marks.

23. The main stages of manuscript preparation are Acquisition of the manuscript, selection of the manuscript, evaluation of the manuscript, copy editing.
24. Layout is the preliminary plan of a printing job. It is the arrangement of text, headings, images, margins, and other elements on the pages of a book. A good layout makes a book attractive, well-organised, and easy to read. It helps readers understand the content without difficulty and improves their reading experience.
25. The major principles of publishing are Law of Trial and Error, Law of Specialization, Law of Demand and Supply, Law of Surfeit or large numbers, Law of Co-existence, Law of Averages, Law of Obsolescence, and Law of Infant Mortality.
26. A newsletter is a publication issued regularly by an organisation, institution, or company to share news, updates, announcements, and information with its readers. It may be published in print or digital form. The basic format of a newsletter includes a masthead, title, date, editor's message, news articles, photographs, announcements, and contact details. A well-designed newsletter presents information clearly and keeps its readers informed about important activities and developments.

(2 x 10=20)